

Management 100: Leadership and Communication in Groups
The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania
Professors Barone, Boyer, Greenhalgh, Hirshon, and Newberry
Fall 2015

“Leadership is at its best when the vision is strategic, the voice persuasive, the results tangible”
Michael Useem, The Leadership Moment

Course Description

Objective: Through the process of action, reflection, experimentation, and application, Management 100 aims to develop your leadership, teamwork, and communication skills. The course provides many occasions to strengthen your ability to exercise leadership through service, to speak persuasively, and to work collaboratively with a diverse group of individuals. Over the course of the semester, you will acquire a heightened sense of your individual strengths and opportunities for growth through feedback (or “feedforward,” forward-looking, constructive coaching).

Research Project: Since feedback is so central to Management 100, students will participate in a research project led by doctoral candidate Elizabeth Wolf in collaboration with Dr. Greenhalgh. The goal of the project is to learn how best to avoid misunderstandings between feedback givers and receivers in the feedback process. Research conducted this fall will explore how individuals interpret and make sense of the feedback they receive in face-to-face evaluations. Students must complete a short survey after their "Individual Performance Review" meetings with their TAs. TAs will provide the surveys, which must be completed immediately. Individual responses to these surveys will only be seen by Elizabeth Wolf and will never be shown to the TAs or Dr. Greenhalgh. Students are required to complete the survey as part of the course, but may choose to opt out of allowing their responses to be used for research.

Method of Instruction: 11 sections of approximately 60 students are scheduled each year (nine in the fall; two in the spring). Attached to each section are six recitations. Your recitation determines your project team. Whether you are in lecture participating in role plays or simulations, in recitation conducting feedback sessions, or out in the field working on your project, Management 100 is highly interactive and participative. The hallmark of the course is experiential learning.

In short, Management 100 is “upside down, backwards, and high touch.” The course is upside down because the project team experience is the primary text of the class, supported by readings and classroom activities and discussion. The course is backwards because you “take the test first and then study”—in other words, you go out into the community, meet with your clients, work on your projects, and then return to the classroom and reflect on what happened and on what you would do the same or differently. The course is high touch because you roll up your sleeves and complete a task, but you must also build strong relationships with each other and your client.

Team Projects: Over the course of the year, Management 100 teams complete nearly 70 field projects. In the fall, freshmen participate in community service projects, a good number supplied by the United Way; in the spring, upper level transfer and dual degree students work on consulting projects vetted by Wharton’s Small Business Development Center (SBDC).

The spring consulting project is an external communications audit that entails both primary or original research and secondary research (a review of pre-existing analyses of industry trends, standards, and best practices). The completed audit includes three deliverables, identifies strengths and opportunities, and gives the client food for thought for the future:

- A Portfolio Review. Analyze the organization's current communications material in all media (print, electronic, broadcast, Internet). A portfolio review looks at issues of content, design, effectiveness, readability, and professionalism.
- Competitor Research. Explore the organization's key competitors. How are competitors communicating with stakeholders? How does the client's communication compare with others?
- Voice of Customer. Research how customers perceive the client's communications. Are current messages and distribution channels effective? Do customers understand the message(s) your client is communicating? How do customers want to be communicated with? What media and messages would be most effective?

Whether completing a service project or an external communication audit, keep in mind that successful team engagements are:

- Inspiring. Make a real contribution to the mission of your client's organization.
- Challenging. Under-promise and over-deliver on project objectives.
- Achievable. Put in the time to make your project a success. As a rule of thumb, expect to spend about twice as much time outside of class as in.
- Creative. Structure the way you execute your project but leave room for creativity.
- Flexible. Show resilience. Your project can change for reasons outside of anyone's control.
- Accessible. Make the effort to meet your client on site. Most project sites are accessible by foot, taxi, or public transportation.
- Responsive. Contact your client at least once a week by email and copy your TA.

The field projects—whether community service or consulting—provide an excellent opportunity for you to develop your skills, build a team, and contribute to the greater community.

Advisors and Consultants: Your Management 100 TA will facilitate your group, advise you on the scope of your project and your relationship with your client. Your TA will also give you guidance on assignments in the course. In the spring, Project Consultants from The Wellynn Group, LLC, will serve as an invaluable resource to you, helping you manage project scope and complete the external communication audit.

Materials: Course materials include a required course pack and two suggested texts: Economical Writing and The Business Writer's Handbook. You can purchase your course pack online at study.net, and you can buy the supplemental books at the University of Pennsylvania Book Store. A limited number of handouts and on-line instructional materials (including your tent card, the Hogan Career Report, and the HRDQ survey of Communication Style) will be charged to your bursar account.

Academic Integrity: During the course of the semester, you will be representing your team, the course, The Wharton School, and the University of Pennsylvania. As a representative of the University, your behavior and conduct must be exemplary. The University's code on academic integrity "prohibits acts of academic dishonesty that include cheating, plagiarism, fabrication, multiple submission, misrepresentation of academic records, facilitating academic dishonesty and gaining unfair advantage in an academic exercise." If you are unsure if an action constitutes a violation, please refer to the code and consult with your instructor:

<http://www.upenn.edu/academicintegrity/>.

You will also need to practice good citizenship at the University and follow all policies and procedures. For example, if you are a team of freshmen planning an event on campus (holding a concert, securing artists, reserving rooms, and so on), consult the Office of Student Affairs Activity Manual <http://www.vpul.upenn.edu/osa/manual/index.html>.

Moreover, standards for conduct during class are high. Instructors and TAs expect you to

- Come to class on time and alert your instructor and TA if you need to leave early
- Be prepared: complete readings and survey instruments in advance of class
- Unless instructed otherwise, keep laptops closed and electronic devices off and out of sight
- Stay on top of class requirements by checking the syllabus and Canvas announcements regularly

Assessment, Evaluation & Grading: Since Management 100 is highly interactive and experiential, class attendance is required. Lateness and unexcused absences will have a negative impact on your individual performance evaluation and final grade.

Management 100 instructors set you up for success and expect you to do well as an individual student and as a project team. The course provides a lot of support—from teammates, TAs, consultants, clients, and instructors. Along the way, instructors work closely with TAs to ensure that no recitation team has an unfair advantage over another. Instructors also work closely together to make sure that grades are distributed similarly across lectures. At the end of the term, when determining percentages of letter grades within lectures, instructors take into account student performance in the context of his or her team and the class. Your final grade is a composite portrait, a collection of snapshots of individual and team performance. Keep in mind that Management 100 rewards team performance: The better your group performs on team assignments, the better you will perform as an individual. See the summary chart of assignments, evaluation, and grading below. Please note that grade books are closed once final grades are posted.

INDIVIDUAL and TEAM WRITING ASSIGNMENTS

Images of Leadership (250 words)

See the Images of Leadership website for instructions on posting an image and writing essay. Bring a copy of your posted image and essay to class.

1. Critical Thinking

You provide an argument explaining why the image captures the essence of leadership for you, and you link your argument to your image (you consider, for example, what particular aspects of the image connect to what you believe is the essence of leadership).

2. Evidence

You provide specific evidence from the image to back your main point. Your evidence is also relevant to the three key words you have pulled out of your essay to tag your image.

3. Structure

Your essay provides an introduction that orients your reader and a conclusion that wraps up your thoughts. Moreover, the body of the essay flows logically from point to point.

4. Audience

Your tone is appropriate and sufficiently formal. Since the essay is personal, you are welcome to use first person.

5. Control of Language

Your essay keeps within the targeted length of 250 words, plus or minus 10%. Your essay is also free of grammatical and spelling errors.

The images of leadership assignment is worth 5 points. This assignment introduces you to course criteria for evaluation and gives you the opportunity to get coaching on your writing from your TA.

Email/ Letter of Engagement (500 words)

Once you meet with your client, you will need to write a letter of engagement. Your letter shows your client that you understand his or her needs, gives a realistic appraisal of the scope of your undertaking so that you can deliver what you promise, and specifies a time frame for project completion. To write an effective letter:

1. Critical Thinking

Let your vision, mission, and values as a team inform the purpose and scope of the project.

2. Structure

Outline what your team plans to do.

3. Evidence

Draw an action plan; sketch individual responsibilities and include a timetable.

4. Audience

Confirm your commitment, your accessibility and responsiveness.

5. Control of Language

Write your letter in a professional manner

Attach a projected budget of expenses to your letter. Work with your client to see if he or she can offset some of the cost of completing your project. You can also request funds for supplies from the Penn Book Store, transportation to and from the project site, and photocopying at Campus Copy. All expenditures require advance approval. Please email mgmt100- projects@wharton.upenn.edu for approval. Please note that a lab fee of $15 per student goes towards funding miscellaneous project expenses.

Once you and your client have agreed upon your letter of engagement and budget projections, create a work plan, a detailed version of your letter's action plan. Update your work plan each week and send a weekly email to your client. Copy your team and your TA.

Writing and sending your email/ letter of engagement, attaching a projected budget of expenses, updating your work plan and timesheets each week, and sending a weekly email update to your client (copying your team and TA) – all factor into your team performance review.

Team Case Study (500 words)

As a group, write a concise case study about an issue facing your team. Keep in mind that a case is a partial, historical, and clinical study of a problematic situation. Case studies are partial because they do not provide a conclusive resolution to the situations that they describe. Cases are historical since they usually follow a chronological sequence in reporting events. And cases appear to have clinical objectivity because they are written as third-person narratives, avoiding overt evaluation of the situations and people described. As you draft your team case, pretend you are filming an important scene for a documentary; capture the moment as though you are looking through a camera's lens: Write your case study in the present tense and third-person, and make sure that every team member is represented by name. Sample case studies are in the course pack.

Timely posting of a high quality draft and final team case contribute to your team performance review.

INDIVIDUAL and TEAM SPEAKING ASSIGNMENTS

Status Report

5 minutes per speaker

Each team will present a series of five status reports. Your presentation gives an update on your team's progress through the lens of a course topic. Since the topics are broad, you and your partner or partners have the flexibility to speak about your team's growth in an authentic way:

Round 1	Round 2	Round 3	Round 4	Round 5
Character Strengths	Personality Characteristics	Interpersonal Behaviors	Communication Styles	Negotiation Styles

The status report – like the team case study and analysis – treats the project team experience as a live case study. Accordingly, you will identify a key issue related to your topic, analyze its causes, and look to the future by proposing a way to reduce liabilities and to make the most of assets.

Use an academic reading (one per speaker) to give your analysis depth. Select your article from a peer-reviewed, scholarly journal within the field of management. Use Ulrichsweb (a search source of detailed information on more than 300,000 periodicals) to screen articles:

<http://ulrichsweb.serialssolutions.com/>

You will have a chance to practice your presentation with your TA and team during Monday evening rehearsals. On the day you present, bring two copies of your slide deck to class. Print your slides as black and white handouts, three slides per page.

Your instructor—in consultation with a team of TAs—will evaluate and score your presentation according to the course criteria below:

1. Critical Thinking (5 joint points)

You present a solid argument. You make an insightful observation related to your topic, analyze it, and look to the future. You use relevant evidence to back your claim.

2. Structure (3 joint points)

You introduce the presenters, your project, and your main point. You provide a roadmap for the audience to follow. Your argument builds from one presenter to the next, and you provide a clear summation at the end of your talk.

3. Visual Aids (2 joint points)

Your slides enhance and support your argument. Your use of slide titles, full clauses, verbs, and graphics are helpful.

4. Evidence (5 individual points)

You use specific and fresh team examples; you name names. You also use your selected reading effectively. Your choice of journal and article is appropriate and subordinate to team examples. If you use a quote, your quotation is well integrated into the fabric of your talk.

5. Audience, Delivery, and Time Management (5 individual points)

You resist the temptation to read and memorize and speak in a conversational manner from a background of solid preparation. You also use effective body language including eye contact, hand gestures and floor movements to emphasize points. You manage time well and speak within the five-minute time limit, plus or minus 30 seconds.

The status report – worth 20% of your final grade -- is a collaborative assignment; 10 out of 20 points are shared.

Final Client Presentation

15 minutes plus five-minute Q&A

Your final presentation marks the conclusion of your project with your client. The presentation is cumulative, analytical, and persuasive. In consultation with the TA teaching team, your instructor will evaluate your presentation according to the criteria below.

1. Critical Thinking

Your presentation demonstrates strong critical thinking. You highlight key accomplishments and provide your client with thoughtful recommendations for the future. Moreover, you synthesize your recommendations under one overarching theme or unifying point.

2. Structure

Your recommendations guide the structure of your presentation. Your presentation has an effective introduction and conclusion and flows logically from speaker to speaker and point to point. You provide a roadmap to orient your audience.

3. Evidence

Your use of evidence is strong. You choose your best and most vivid examples so that your audience can appreciate concrete measures of your success, both qualitative and quantitative.

4. Audience Analysis

Your tone is conversational, direct, and diplomatic. You speak directly to your client and use second person, "you." At the same time, your tone is appropriate for a wide audience of peers, TAs, faculty, and guests.

5. Delivery

Your speakers represent the team well. You manage time effectively, and your presentation has high visual impact. Speakers share the floor, and fellow team members field questions with confidence. You look and act like a team.

You will have a chance to practice your presentation in class. Use the dry run as a chance to give your best version of the client presentation to date. You can also use the dry run as an opportunity to select speakers who would like another chance to practice public speaking. Choose your three best speakers for the final client presentation. During the dry run and client presentation, all team members will join the speakers for a brief question and answer session. After the dry run, you will have a chance to refine and rehearse your client presentation with your TA and team.

When you do the dry run in class, bring one black-and-white copy of your slide deck for your instructor. When you give your client presentation in class, provide one color copy of your slide deck for your client and one black and white copy for your instructor. In both cases, post your slides on Canvas well in advance and print your slides as handouts, three per page.

On the day of the client presentation, hand your client a short and sincere hand written thank you note signed by all team members.

The client presentation – worth 25% of your final grade – represents a team effort.

INDIVIDUAL and TEAM PERFORMANCE

First and Second Individual Performance Reviews and Self-Portraits

The process for assessing performance at mid-term and at the end of the semester begins with your own self-assessment. First, consider whether your performance is excellent, good, or satisfactory in each of the following categories:

- Participation – Do you excel in class?
 - Do you come to lecture, recitation, rehearsals? On time? Prepared?
 - Do you come to class having done the readings and assignments?
 - Do you make contributions that move the conversation forward in a productive way?
- Productivity - Do you excel in the completion of your group project?
 - Do you come to meetings? On time? Prepared?
 - Do you fulfill your responsibilities and duties to your teammates, project, and client?
 - Do you respond promptly to emails from your group and client regarding project work?
- Relationship Building - Do you excel in building constructive relationships with others?
 - Do you interact with each other, classmates, the teaching team, your client, and community in a productive way?
 - Do you bring out the best in yourself and others by showing consideration and respect?
 - Do you serve as an ambassador for your group, class, and Penn?

Second, give your group members strength-based feedback on-line (See Canvas for link). Write directly to your teammates. Tell them what they are like when they are at their best. Offer one or two opportunities for growth and development.

Third, write a best-self portrait. Your TA will download your teammates' written comments and post them on Canvas for you to read and use to write a one-page (250-word) portrait of yourself at your best. Include one or two opportunities for growth. Post your self-portrait on Canvas.

Fourth, discuss your portrait with your TA and team. During mid-semester, use your self-portrait as a springboard for discussion with your TA and, subsequently, with your team during recitations dedicated to 360 degree “feedforward.” At the end of the semester, your TA will either meet with you one-on-one or respond to your second self-portrait on Canvas. Whether in-person or on-line, your TA will acknowledge your growth over the course of the semester and give you some thoughts about ways you can continue to grow and develop.

The first performance review helps you confirm that you are on the right track and gives you the chance to consider what modifications you would make in the future. The second performance review takes into account your development since mid-term and the degree to which you have made the most of your strengths and minimized any weaknesses.

The first performance review is worth 10% and will give you a sense of how you are doing in your team with respect to participation, task completion, and relationship building. The second is worth 15% and takes into account your development since mid-semester. TAs recommend grades to instructors. Instructors review and approve each grade and make sure that the average grade is the same across all recitations in the lecture.

Team Performance Reviews and Team Portraits

In order to evaluate team performance, your instructor will assess the degree to which your group accomplishes the goals you set with your client and how well you pull together as a team and manage the client relationship.

You have an opportunity to assess your team's performance at the same time you evaluate individual performance. Consider whether you think your team's performance is excellent, good, or satisfactory in each of the following categories:

- Productivity - Does your team excel in completing tasks?
 - Your team sets ambitious goals and accomplishes them.
 - If your goals change over the semester, your team sets new objectives and reaches new heights.
 - Your team shows initiative.
 - You go above and beyond the call of duty.
- Group Dynamics - Do team members excel in building constructive relationships with each other?
 - Members of your group come together as a unified team.
 - Members are mutually accountable and interdependent.
 - Members support each other's growth and development.
 - The group team would be happy to work together in the future.
- Client Management - Does your team excel in building a positive client relationship?
 - Whether face-to-face, on the phone, or over email, your team builds a strong relationship with your client.

Your client will respond to the same on-line survey questions as you. Your TA and instructor will share team comments and client feedback with your team. Once you have both sets of feedback in hand, work with your team to write a brief team portrait (250 words). Comment on your team's productivity to date, the quality of your group dynamics, and your ability to manage the client relationship in a positive way. Your TA and instructor will craft a comment in response.

When determining your final team performance review grade, your instructor will take into account multiple perspectives and comments from team members, TA, and client.

At mid-term, see comments from your teammates and client in order to make mid-course corrections. Your final team performance review is worth 25% and will take into account your team's progress from mid-term to the end of the semester.
